Sector description

Control Room: The Amarran's core. Originally designed as a Captain's Chamber, the Control Room was later used to store the master reset device - an organic control unit and a safety switch in the unlikely scenario that the ships AI goes rogue. Rest assured, though, Alpha is state of the art technology created by some of the brightest engineers in the universe.

So this game has its moments. Relatively fun Beta. It is based on SC2 Arcade Desert Strike. I <3 Des Here is my list of things that unfortunately make in inferior during the Beta.

- It doesn't allow you to move the screen when you are selecting a card. It isn't a very big map.
- When you first start off people have an advantage because of cards, upgrades or specials. I think this really bothers me because Des is about countering units. It is much harder to counter when you simply cannot have that upgrade.
- You cannot just click a unit and see what it is. You have to hold tab to see their layout.
- At the starting when you can earn extra $$$ the units have terrible AI
- . This aint a good race game ...

if you do a quick grand prix. select 5 laps, finish the race, the whole field is within 3 seconds ...

So you got the whole field fighting for first place, all taking corners with 3 to 5 drivers next to each other ... the whole race. Come on, this aint racing.... nice presentation and very impressive. some interactive content but mostly just need to sit and watch. Be aware if you have 3d nausea like me. The later half of the game has fast moving camera and can hit you quite fast.... This game is dead, with only one server active that is empty. That being said, if you buy this game during the sale and persuade a few friends to buy it too, you could have a bit of fun with this game. During its peak, this game was a very popular and fun game however I didn't play the MNC series in its prime so I never truly got to learn this game or SMNC, and am stuck with the blitz mode on this game. The Blitz mode, like SMNC can be played solo though at least, and I prefer the Blitz mode on this version as it feels way more relaxed and is a nice way to chillax and get rid of stress.

In conclusion, if you are looking for a multiplayer game to drop in and drop out of if you have no friends to play it with, then this game is not for you. However, when the game is on sale and your friends are willing to buy it to play with you, i'd say it is still worth the sale price despite being completely dead. Also the Blitz mode was worth the sale price in my opinion.. Terrible mouse controls. It's like it's lagging when moving and it really just feels terrible when turning around. Also, when I tried to change sensitivity from the menu I couldn't get back into the game anymore. Oh, and the loading time is annoyingly long. This game needs fixes.. This game is quite old, but still works well, the remastered version is also fine, but it could be better if the developers changed the command system to a modern one.

For all the players who like point and click adventures classic or not.. I haven't played much but i've been looking for a good bomberman remake for so long and it's free, no reason not to try it. it plays great and I plan on playing it alot with friends. I would gladly pay for this game pretty much as it is.

However, a couple of things I would like to change or have an option for in match creation is;

- Adding AI if possible
- having options to disable the bomb kick or set a limited use for each map/timed cooldown so it feel more like the old bomberman where you can trap enemies.

The kick is a interesting tactical idea though so I wouldn't like to see it fully removed form the game.

Hope to see some of you in there!. Fun, light, casual game.

Leveling up without xp is very weird, specially cause you can explore the mechanics and level up all your heros to the max if you have enough patient to grab a flask and go back to town (repeat 200x).

Dungeons also can bug A LOT and leave your heroes stuck, making you lose your progress, frustrating.

Despite these two flaws, it's a really fun game.. Its kinda a "meh" but its interesting to play and hear about the older versions of the game.

I would recommend if you like the game and have some extra money laying around.. A bit of a waste of money considering you can get an identical version for free. And seeing as it is of average flash game quality, it wouldn't be worth anything even if it wasn't on Armour Games, Kongregate, etc.

game might have some potential for the future , atm its very basic but looks nice , but seen and played worse games in early access that costed more .

Going to keep a eye on this game its progress and hope it will develops futher.. Very intriguing and addictive game, very impressed :). A pretty pointless game, you would have to have no other games to play in order to be entertained by this.. Super relaxing and easy to setup and play. Even my three year old enjoys it!. I flew at Palo Airport once (for real) and bought this add-on out of kind of romanticism. Palo Alto airport is extremely tiny. In reality it's just an aerodrome with a big parking for small propeller planes and a short runway.

I could only make the scenery work twice. I had to install and uninstall three times to see the scenery just after purchasing it. Afterwards, it disappeared and I never saw the scenery again, even though Steam says it's installed and FSX has it marked as top priority in loading.

To make the long story short: this scenery is not worth its price (you can even buy a whole flight simulator for its price) and it's not even working correctly for me. However, I cannot even be bothered to spend more time trying to fix it, get technical support or asking for my money back. It's not worth it for such a small aerodrome.

I just wasted my money.

UPDATE: This add-on is working again after using Steam's verify integrity. However, I still think it's too expensive for just a small aerodrome. Not even the most basic surroundings (like Stanford) are modeled. I regret the purchase, and Steam wouldn't give my my money back because add-on times are not counted separately, but all FSX altogether. I spent 15 mins playing in the Palo Alto area but obviously I had played FSX for hundreds of hours... so no refund was allowed.
